

European Research Day

European Research Day (ERD) is a one-day event at the University of Ottawa that celebrates and promotes Europe as a hub for research and innovation.

The event is designed so that European researchers outside of Europe meet, discuss and exchange concepts about their research projects, professional and personal experience in their respective diasporas and overall career path. It presents a unique networking opportunity through which they can meet researchers from their current regions to advance their careers and explore opportunities to collaborate.

The event is open to all European researchers in North America, as well as current, previous and potential North American (Canada / U.S.) researchers who have or would like to benefit from European research grants to further their careers, representatives from European Embassies, North American universities, industry and partners.

About EURAXESS North America

The objective of EURAXESS North America (Canada & USA) is to promote actively Europe as an attractive and open place for researchers and innovators. It networks not only European researchers working in North America but also non-European researchers/innovators with the potential of moving to Europe or to a non-European destination where EURAXESS Worldwide operates.

An exhibit area will be available throughout the day with information about Spanish programs in science and innovation, as well as research grants.
