

Spanish animation filmmaking at OIAF 2019

The 2019 Ottawa International Animation Festival brings Guillermo García Carsí, the Spanish creator of “Pocoyo,” and features a Spanish film in competition: “I’m not scared of the crocodile,” by Marc Riba and Anna Solana.

From September 25-29, 2019, the world’s most cutting-edge, thoughtful, funny and provocative animation films return to downtown Ottawa. Attendees will also have to chance to mingle with many of animation’s most celebrated stars, studios and characters. The Ottawa International Animation Festival (OIAF) is an annual five-day event that has been bringing the animation community together in a vibrant hub since 1976. With 80+ screenings, talks, and exhibits presented in venues across downtown Ottawa, and a total attendance of 28,000, it attracts artists, producers, students and animation fans from around the world.

As an international Festival, the OIAF has showcased many Spanish filmmakers and their films over the last 42 years. Spanish director Alberto Vázquez won the coveted Public Prize in 2017 for his film Decorado.
